

Ivium

The art of liberation

Preface

The process of educating ourselves is not as easy as it sounds. While simple, it demands our attention like caring for a child. As we go through a formal education process, what we all intuitively know about the process is that it's impractical.

By presenting information to young people in small packets of forty-five minutes to an hour, what you are doing is akin to the media soundbites that intentionally provide only enough information to convince an audience of mindless but intelligent soldiers or factory workers, nothing more than slaves compared to their birthright as sons and daughters of god's creation.

Through the ivium, the process of transformation from slave to free individual can be made. Through processes of self mastery and self governance a new world can be made. A planetary organism instead of a world government.

When we look upon ourselves, we see the face of God. No metaphors. The fractal self similarity of all life to a holonic correspondence. As above so below, as within so without. This is the ancient wisdom, this is the spark of God in all life.

This sovereignty which has created government can also create self governance, but only to those who understand the above. Education instead of war. Wisdom instead of violence.

The ivium is the way to creating a world of human enlightenment instead of human ineptitude.

Introduction

It is a pleasure to learn, just as it is a pleasure to create. To find the necessary discipline, to defeat your lesser urges and be a stronger, better person. The purpose of this text is to create a brighter world through self discipline, becoming one's own disciple in the pursuit of self mastery.

It is perhaps the most difficult but worthwhile task that there is. But only without a roadmap, tested by someone who has been on this path for their entire life. It is possible to be a master of, not the outside world, but of your inner world.

The Ivium is the author's attempt to expand the Liberal arts of the trivium and quadrivium, which are a testament to the power of the freed mind, as we saw in the renaissance. The need for a culture that revives the ancient wisdoms of grammar, logic, rhetoric; math, geometry, music and astronomy is gifted with the knowledge of their own innate beauty, because they realize that they are that and so much more.

Univium

Aesthetic (beauty) world order

The need to have a beautiful world as opposed to an inept one. The univium is about bringing about a brighter future for infants and children on earth. Doing so involves integration of many spheres.

The univium is an aesthetic, the aesthetic of harmony with both the structures of nature on earth and in the cosmos through fractal geometry, which is the reason for such rough veins like, or just repeating structures mathematically in nature. The Mandelbrot set fractal is called the thumbprint of God in the community who study it.

Things like, but not exclusive to classical music, especially for the newly born is important for that child and their later ability to develop as a person, and so society is determined by what environments we create for our children.

It is all there already for some, but establishing this environment everywhere must be the obligation of every cell of the planetary organism in the Ivium process, every human being that gives a damn about life and the universe.

We shall here define beauty being the effect of excellence, functionality, and complexity. We must all be creating a world that is beautiful for all life. This cannot be done through industrial pollution, nor its education paradigm. The paradigm changes now.

Integrating the forest into the factory and permaculture, the world can change from a prison into a paradise. It is through organic technology, mushrooms and living plants that we will heal and feed and cloth and shelter the world. All we need is the end of all government: start self governing.

This is the way, the ivium.

Bivium

Art, linguistics, concepts
Expression

The bivium is what you call the expression of a child's creativity. One who is raised in a stimulating enough environment will innately become expressive unless they are mentally handicapped either physically or genetically.

The bivium is the subtle exposure to the young mind to the fractal universe, and the resulting creativity.

To aid this process, we suggest a video dictionary of all the laws of physics depicted in a series. And as this lexicon evolves it could become more and more easily deliverable to all age ranges. I envision a compilation of already existing video clips. They simply need to be cataloged.

Trivium

Grammar
Logic
Rhetoric

The Liberal art of the trivium consists of grammar, logic, and rhetoric, as we said in the introduction. When the trivium is gifted, it is a lifelong treasure from the ancient wisdom of Aristotle.

Grammar is the content that makes communication possible. The earlier that a child is introduced to the trivium, the better. As a society, in the context of the Ivium, making education the priority instead of money. In fact we make money obsolete when we can ensure that every child, no matter the circumstances, is given the gift of these arts. Language is an art. Logic is an art. Rhetoric is an art.

Logic is the art of how to think instead of what to think. How to know whether to trust someone, and how to put patterns together and see things more deeply than just their surface, analysing details, all in the pursuit of truth. When we process information in our minds, we are either applying logic or we are not.

When we are not processing logic or grammar, it is readily apparent to those that do. This elitist, and it is merited. When we become the better version of ourselves through wisdom it is for the betterment of ourselves and society. When we do not, and are willing slaves to a corporate industrial monstrosity, we are the cancer that is eating away at the earth instead of replenishing it.

Rhetoric is the result of logic and grammar, it is the act of communication, the delivery of information to another, and in some cases to convince. The art of rhetoric is the use of logic to know one's audience, and tailor their delivery to the best fit of their audience.

Quadrivium

Math

Geometry

Music

Astronomy

The quadrivium consists of the four languages of nature's god: math, geometry, music, and astronomy. When this language is gifted, along with the recognition that this language created us, we become connected to a higher learning.

What am I in the context of all this beauty? What kind of world are we creating? What kind of fruit? We can be creating either a heaven or a hell depending upon the choices we make and perspectives we take.

It is through the quadrivium and the quintessence of its meaning that we realize there is a higher life force, that the universe is alive, that it is of a living awareness of its own, and that we are self similar gives us the power as creators.

This is the beginning of a new education, what follows then, as creators is as much an art as the rest of these languages, but consists of the world within.

Pentivium

Purification
Accumulation
Application
Balance
Play

The art of the pentivium is the use of balance. But the first step has to be to act. To care about more than yourself. To recognize the beauty in all things by being beauty's blessing. Be yourself wise and shower the world with your wisdom. By doing this we all become free.

By purifying ourselves of the cultural influences of the world we can integrate ourselves with the world in coherence within ourselves. For instance meditation, like dreams, has the effect of integrating large concepts through visualization and awareness training, all of which is subconscious unless we give it our fullest minds attention.

You see we must be knowledgeable about the universe before we can start to know how cosmic we are. The alternative is a mere higher animal, a predator prey instead of a representation of the universe.

By accumulating knowledge we gain the power that comes with this deeper realization of who we are until we could be a constantly evolving being that keeps on reinventing itself and discovering new challenges. Being so bold means really taking on the adventure of life.

The application of whatever knowledge we accumulate is the adventure of life, and it is through that adventure that we gain experience. By becoming more than mere students of life's languages to artists and artisans, we go through a portal of self discovery and wonder that we call life.

Purifying your palate of knowledge and beliefs is important, because it means you're always moving to a more perfect approximation of the truth. The truth is perfect, and you are not. Therefore, you must always balance your knowledge and commitment to said knowledge, and your actions and commitment to those actions, with the ALL. 0

Balance in the accumulation of knowledge and practice is as ancient as martial arts. The discipline needed to be a fully actualized human being means having a stronger mind than it does anything else. Balance is the key to all arts. Balance is the art of arts.

Once we find balance in the process of the first three stages of the pentivium, all that is left is to take on the adventure of the Ivium. Playing life as a live action role play where we are actually together as a family instead of acting out the script handed to us by the industrial complexes who have replaced them. We can stress here that play is an occupation, and if we play life correctly, as God intended, we can still create a paradise instead of a prison on earth by liberating all from the golden shackles of money and debt, and replacing them with a forest farm, homesteading, vertical farming, permaculture and decentralized everything.

Play, without friends, without family, is not the same as play by ourselves. When we connect to each other there is a spark of deeper understanding. When we are not afraid to be ourselves and express ourselves freely we may hurt others, but it is our obligation to ourselves, to them, and to the universe to be honest before anything.

Then and only then can we act as the puzzle pieces that we are and connect to one another in the same way we connect to a dog, cat, or the moon with the recognition that the player of me is the player of you.

Hexivium

Strategy

Synergy

Organization

Education

Dissemination

Manifestation

Strategy is the art of thinking one's own course as an original character in the game of life. When we say game we are not using metaphors. This is the ultimate live action role play, because it is real.

By the art of strategy it is inevitable that one's own existence is determined by the strategic synergy of companions and friends, forming a community, a family tribe.

When the sovereign players of life's game are then organized into communities and are self governing, self mastering, we all become richer. For if they are guided by permaculture instead of money, and organize themselves to be in better harmony with nature, we both solve the environment, and ourselves.

Once you know all of this through and through it is your obligation to share it, educate people with the things that you learn about in order to try and create the best version of yourself and others. The medium carries with it varying degrees of authority and authenticity. We should always be meeting people.

Using whatever methods available to start actively creating something that can inform an audience over and over in an evergreen fashion is what we mean when we say Dissemination.

This media and culture that surrounds it then manifest itself in the form of a planetary organism the ivium guiding as its educational and ethical framework.
